

Current State of Posana

Flavor made with love, based in the berkeley area

About the Business

Background

Founded in 2025, Aditya Banerjee made a protein bar called Posana that is very nutritious and have a brand of an elephant.

Origin

Aditya Banerjee found protein bars very boring. "Too many chocolate chips, tastes like sand," was a stigma he saw and needed to change.

Product

The bar is sold in packs of 12 and has 220 calories. They are very tasty and the founder is continuiong to expand the product line

The Bars

Cinnavanilla Protein Bar
(12-Pack)

Posana Matcha Latte
(12-pack)

Posana Mango Coconut
(with Turmeric)

Cinnavilla, Matcha Latte, Mango Coconut

500k

Raised

20g

Protein

~90

Stores

Overview

Current

Solution

Example

Website

Partnership

Posana Struggles to reach a far audience but is very good at ensuring that their audience stays

Good

- Many Customers make content regarding Posana bars
- The Bars are very marketable due to their colors and aesthetic design
- Their use of their elephant has captivated many people

Bad

- They don't have a great reach on social media
- They struggle to get people to see what is Posana
- No one knows why Posana is better

Key Takeaways

The big issue with Posana's marketing is their initial reach as their customer retention is great, according to their CEO and their customers post about the product.

Revamped Marketing – Our Solution

Fixing reach, improving awareness, and turning brand identity into growth. Capitalizing on Social Media

Posana should shift from static posts to short-form, platform-native video on Instagram and TikTok. Content like taste tests, founder storytelling, and behind-the-scenes clips will help boost reach and make the brand more discoverable. Consistent visuals and trending formats will strengthen recognition and engagement.

Short-form video content to boost reach and discoverability.

Posana's identity and mission need to be communicated more clearly. A concise message explaining what Posana is, why it's unique, and what it represents will help new customers understand the product instantly. Leaning into authenticity, culture, and the meaning behind the elephant will strengthen emotional connection.

Clear messaging so new audiences instantly understand Posana.

Posana already benefits from organic user content, making it ideal for community-driven marketing. Establishing a repost workflow, launching a campus ambassador program, and collaborating with student creators and micro-influencers will accelerate awareness and trust without heavy paid marketing.

Community-powered marketing through creators and ambassadors.

Our Solution – the Summary

By focusing on short-form video content, clear messaging, and community-driven marketing, Posana can expand its reach, boost awareness, and turn loyal customers into active brand advocates.

Our Strategy - Examples

Here are some example of the possible fixes that we suggest.

Possible fixes

Short Form Media

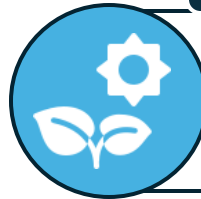

We would do daily posts with many UGC's. They would be very short media – less than 15 seconds. We would have it linked to the tik tok shop

Slogan

Many products have great slogans. "Red Bull Gives you wings" or "Crunchatize me, Cap'n!." A slogan make a product more marketable

Why us?

We will partner with many college campuses and other creators to show off our brand and make advertisements that show why we are better.

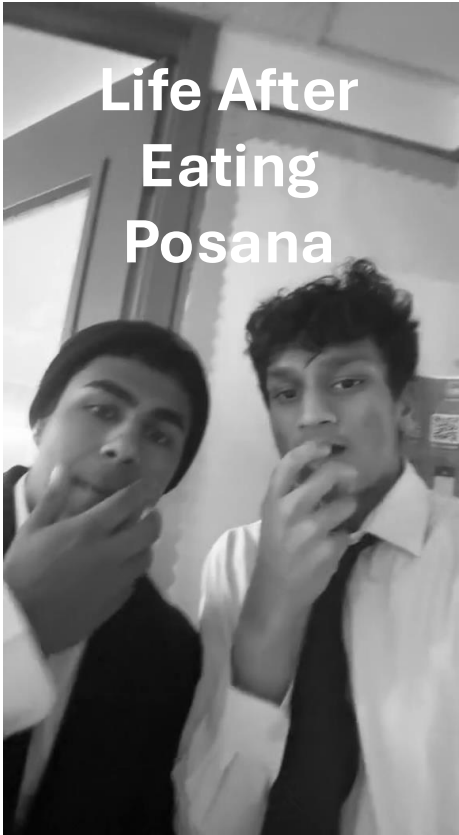

Examples

"A snack that serves your health, not just your taste."

"Tired of chocolate protein bars? Me too."

Examples of Companies giving free stuff on campus

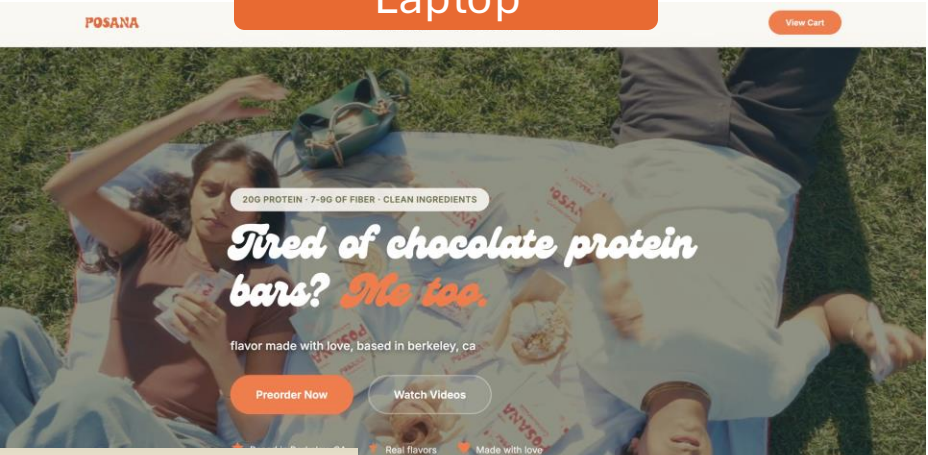

Website Mockup

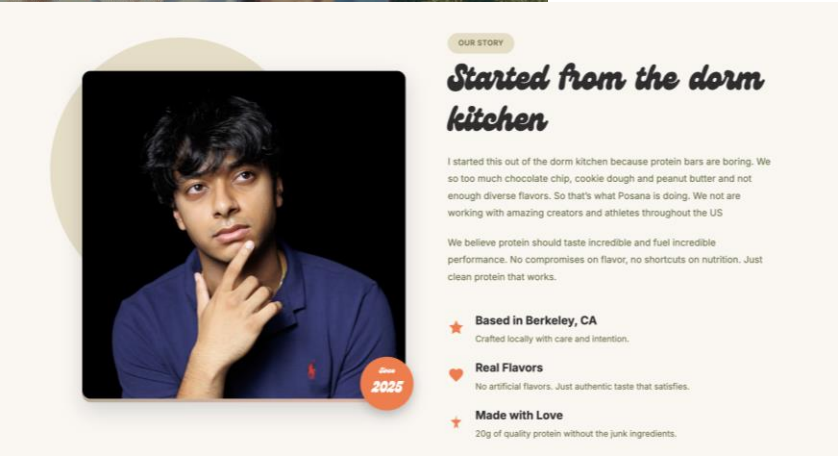

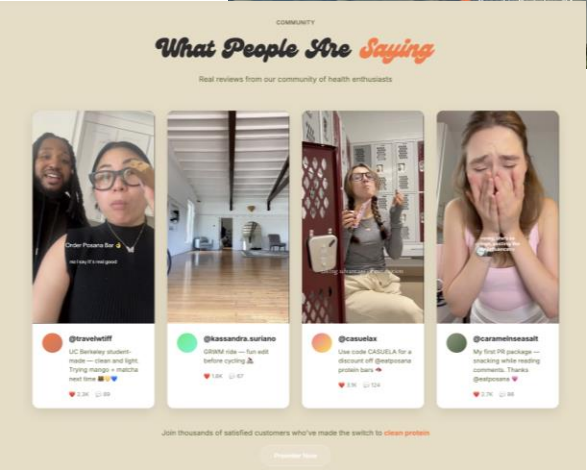

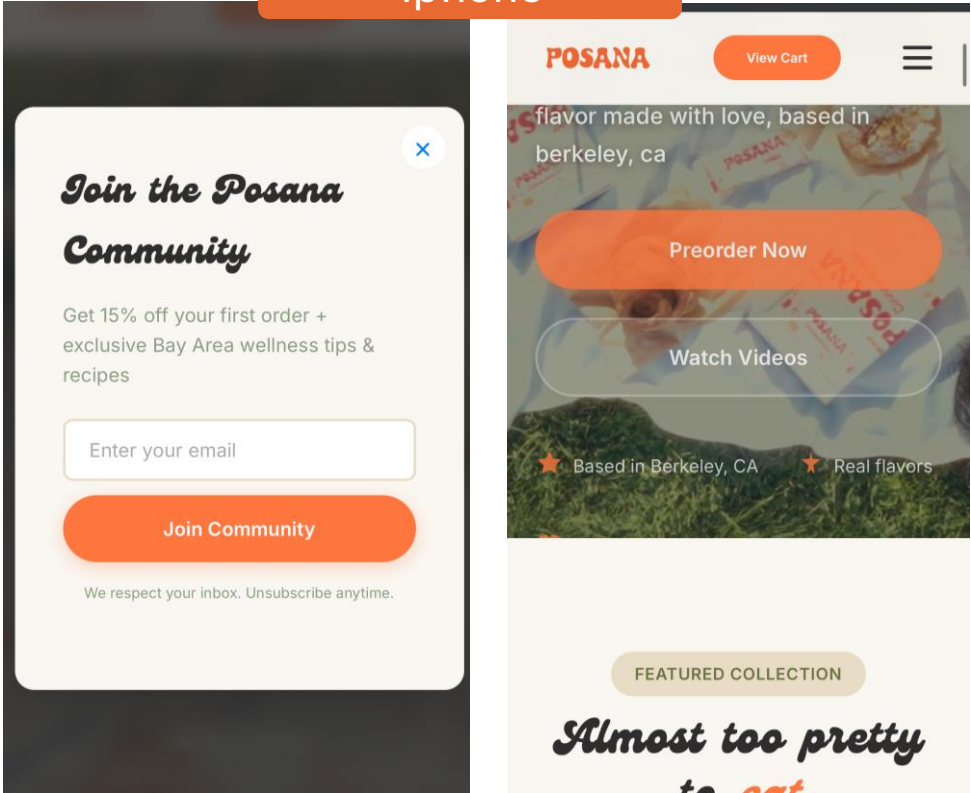

POSANA

Here are some mockups of the website – a better way to market.

Laptop

Iphone

Overview

Current

Solution

Example

Website

Partnership

Potential Partnerships

POSANA

Here are some mockups of the website – a better way to market.

Campus Retail

Student Stores & Co-ops:

Partner with Berkeley stores to get Posana physically in front of students.

Local Cafes:

Work with coffee shops to offer Posana as an add-on.

Gym & Rec Centers:

Sell through recreation centers near colleges where students buy protein snacks

Student Clubs

Cultural Based Clubs:

Partner with South Asian orgs, multicultural groups, and community-based clubs.

Business Clubs:

Leverage the fact that the CEO is from Berkeley to integrate pitch decks

Fitness Communities

Collaborate with athletic clubs and sports teams in various college campuses

Creator Partnership

Campus Micro-Creators:

Work with student TikTokers to do taste test. Example: Carly Tran.

Lifestyle Blogs:

Create a blog on the website that can have collabs

Creator Starter Kits:

Send free samples, with aesthetic packaging, and video prompts to create natural UGC

Brand Collabs

Food Brands:

Collab with other food and gym brands to get other audiences.

Campus Events:

Host student events, pop-ups or orientation fairs.

Sampling Partnerships:

Have taste before you buy stations around the country, especially near grocery stores.

KEY TAKEAWAY

Strategic partnerships make Posana visible on every level of campus life, retail, culture, creators, and community, turning the brand into an everyday staple rather than a one-time purchase.

Overview

Current

Solution

Example

Website

Partnership